GENERAL INFORMATION

After an eventful game drive under the warm African sun, returning to your own comfortable room for a shower and refreshing nap between cool white sheets is just what is needed. The ultimate in bush style, the luxury mobile safari offer travellers a spacious private room experience under canvas. En-suite bush bathrooms, bedside tables and lamps, beds with high density mattresses, feather duvets, carpeted floors, and wardrobes make your tent a space where you can relax in comfort.

When sundown calls for drinks, spirits are included in the bar offering, and you can enjoy them sitting under your canvas shaded verandah. Outdoor areas include a bush lounge with mini-library so you can look up your sightings, and tented dining room for candlelit dinners.

Your hostess attends personally to all the finer details, including hot coffee and tea delivered to you with your morning wakeup call.

A TYPICAL DAY

Your safari day begins with travel in a four-wheel drive vehicle sturdily equipped for the sandy tracks and trails that lead to Botswana's best wildlife viewing. While your guide briefs you about the journey and what you are likely to experience, in another vehicle the camp support team is heading directly to your overnight spot, where your tents, ablutions, dining area, and camp kitchen will be set up under the trees in exclusive and pristine surroundings. Flexibility is a hallmark of all our mobile safaris: if on the way you come across a hunting black heron or a pride of sleepy lion, it is your call to stop and simply enjoy watching until you are ready to move on.

Arriving at camp, you will be welcomed with a cool drink and a tour of your overnight home, and have a chance to relax before the tantalising aromas of a campfire supper rouse you from your tent, or from the spot you have moved your chair to watch a nesting flycatcher. Time for sundowners!

One of the top experiences of an African safari is the time spent around the campfire during and after supper. This is a time for sharing the impressions of the day, for telling stories of other journeys, and for learning about what may be in store the following day. As the fire settles into glowing coals, and the Pearl-spotted owl calls that it is time for bed, you feel your eyelids drooping, and you head to your tent for what could possibly be your best sleep in years.

African wildlife is best experienced at the beginning and end of day when animals are most active. After the 'koko' wake-up call and a hot drink, you will board the open vehicle for an early morning game drive to catch both the waking birds and the big hunters returning from their night-time prowls. Your morning drive will include a stop for tea, coffee, and rusks at a scenic spot, and plenty of pauses to capture the best photos. You will return to camp for a hearty brunch, and time for reading, napping, and recharging your camera batteries.

As the sun settles in the West, after afternoon tea, you will head out again into the bush. This time of day, the sun catches the trees and grass to create a landscape drenched in gold, and the air cools quickly as a breeze follows the wake of the truck. But keep your eyes sharp: there in the warm dust of the track is a lioness, yawning as she moves off into the trees, looking for supper for herself and her hidden cubs. And, as you drive up to the edge of a water-filled pan to stop for snacks and sundowner drinks, the sound of hippos calling and splashing will inscribe this moment in your memory.
